Los Angeles, CA—The Fowler Museum at UCLA presents World on the Horizon: Swahili Arts Across the Indian Ocean, the first major traveling exhibition dedicated to the arts of the Swahili coast. For centuries, peoples from the Arabian Peninsula, Asia, Africa, and Europe have traversed the Indian Ocean in many directions. On the East African coast, this confluence of peoples gave rise to many diverse communities that are often called “Swahili”—after the Arabic word meaning “edge” or “coast.” This exhibition challenges fixed and familiar notions of places like Africa and Asia, and asks visitors to ponder how artistic practices lead people to remap their relationship to seemingly distant cultures.

More than 150 artworks from Kenya, Mozambique, Tanzania, Oman, and Yemen demonstrate how the region is a vibrant site of cultural convergence and illuminate Africa’s contributions to the artistic vocabulary of the wider Indian Ocean world. Among the objects included are beautifully illuminated Qur’ans, intricately carved architectural elements and embellished furniture, vintage studio portraits, and lavish silver and ivory jewelry. Forty works on loan from the National Museums of Kenya and the Bait Al Zubair Museum in Oman are touring the U.S. for the first time.

About the Exhibition
Organized into six thematic sections, the exhibition takes visitors into the streets and homes of Swahili port towns and beyond, highlighting the arts of diplomacy and trade, the built environment and domestic interiors, society and fashion, and spiritual knowledge and devotion. The arts on view speak to an outward-looking ethos—one of encounter and possibility, negotiation, and struggle—that connects the people on the Swahili coast with faraway places, and reveals how people bring the world home.
Between Land and Sea: Objects in Motion introduces the idea of the global mobility of objects, peoples, and ideas, and explores how diplomacy was closely linked to commercial interests and the giving of gifts. Included are a silk coat given to diplomats by the Sultan of Zanzibar, and a rare Kenyan ngoma or drum—one of the most celebrated icons of Swahili heritage today, once a powerful insignia of dynastic power and religious authority.

Architecture of the Port allows audiences to experience the aesthetics of Swahili port towns through the art of the fragment. Door posts, lintels, and tombstones with floral, geometric, and calligraphic motifs constitute a veritable archive of aesthetic languages originating from places throughout the western Indian Ocean rim. They are inventively combined by Swahili carvers in the service of their patrons.

In the Presence of Words includes illuminated Qur’ans and other Arabic manuscripts that convey the lively play between word and image in Swahili residents’ most treasured arts. Also, intimate amuletic jewelry was designed to hold passages from the Qur’an or medicinal inscriptions to protect the wearer. Everyday objects, such as bicycle mud flaps or woven mats, are decorated with colorful poetry, proverbs, conundrums, and commentaries.

Trading the Gaze: Photography on the Swahili Coast features studio photography from the 1950s and 1960s, as well as historic postcards from the region. These items explore the complex impact of colonial modernity on Swahili culture by focusing on how the photograph became one of the most desired emblems of worldliness. The studio portraits tell stories about the importance of self-representation for people living in major urban centers of the coast, including Lamu, Mombasa, and Zanzibar.

At Home in the World: Swahili Interiors shows everyday objects, including embellished spoons, serving vessels from Oman, majestic chairs, and an intricately woven mat from Zanzibar. This section highlights the work of Swahili women as the primary “curators” and agents of Swahili worldliness through their role as stewards of the home.

Ocean of Adornment considers the coastal preference for dressing in material imported from overseas. Stylish women mixed Indian silks, Arab jewelry, platform sandals, and European accessories with adornments from Somalia, India, Yemen, and even China. The originality of Swahili style led Zanzibar to be known as the “Paris of East Africa.”

Publication
A multi-authored book accompanying the exhibition is available from the University of Washington Press. It is the first interdisciplinary study of Swahili visual arts and their historically deep and enduring connections to eastern and central Africa, the port towns of the western Indian Ocean, Europe, and the United States. Edited by curators Prita Meier and Allyson Purpura, the illustrated publication features 17 essays in a mix of formats—personal reflections, object biographies, as well as more in-depth critical treatments.
Credit
This exhibition was organized by Krannert Art Museum, University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign, and curated by Allyson Purpura, KAM senior curator and curator of global African art, and Prita Meier, associate professor of art history at New York University. World on the Horizon has been made possible in part by a major grant from the National Endowment for the Humanities: Exploring the human endeavor. Any views, findings, conclusions, or recommendations expressed in this exhibition do not necessarily represent those of the National Endowment for the Humanities.

Major funding for the Los Angeles presentation is provided by the Martha and Avrum Bluming Exhibition Fund with additional support by the Fowler Exhibition Fund and Ellen Perlmutter and Edward Jones, to date.

About the Fowler Museum
The Fowler Museum at UCLA explores global arts and cultures with an emphasis on works from Africa, Asia, the Pacific, and the indigenous Americas—past and present. The Fowler enhances understanding of world cultures through dynamic exhibitions, publications, and public programs, informed by interdisciplinary approaches and the perspectives of the cultures represented. The work of international contemporary artists is presented within complex frameworks of politics, culture, and social action.

Fowler Museum at UCLA
308 Charles E Young Dr N | Los Angeles, CA 90024 | fowler.ucla.edu
Admission to the Fowler is free
Hours: Wed 12–8pm and Thu–Sun 12–5pm
Parking available in UCLA Lot 4, 398 Westwood Plaza at Sunset Blvd. ($12/day)

Opening Program | Saturday, October 20, 2018
6–7pm Lecture with exhibition curators
7–9pm Opening party

CAPTIONS
Artist unknown (Makonde peoples, Mozambique)
Lipiko mask, mid-20th century
Wood, pigments
Courtesy of QCC Art Gallery–The City University of New York, Accession no. 13-02-03
Photo: chrisbrownphoto.com

J. P. Fernandes
Ostafrikanische Schönheit [East African Beauty]
Photograph ca. pre-1900; (postcard printed ca. 1912)
Colored collotype on postcard stock
Collection of Christraud M. Geary

Artist unknown (Swahili peoples, Zanzibar, Tanzania)
Chair of power (kiti cha enzi), 1989
Wood, ivory, string
Fowler Museum at UCLA, X89.367
Photo Don Cole